

Campus Sustainability at Harvard: Principles and Practice

Thursday, November 4th, 3-5pm
Spangler Auditorium, lower floor of the Spangler Center

Please join the Harvard Green Campus Initiative and representatives from our interfaculty initiative for an exciting and extraordinary event celebrating Harvard's widespread commitment to achieving campus environmental sustainability. Harvard's new Sustainability Principles will be presented, and a panel of senior leaders from all across Harvard will discuss the green achievements of their respective schools and departments as examples of how Harvard's commitment to sustainability is being realized campus-wide.

Event Panelists

Jack Spengler, Akira Yamaguchi Professor of Environmental Health and Human Habitation, Harvard School of Public Health

David Zewinski, Associate Dean for Physical Resources and Planning, Faculty of Arts and Sciences

Frank Hayes, Chief of Operations, Harvard Business School

Tim Bowman, Associate Dean for Operations, Harvard Kennedy School of Government

Peter Stroup, Director of Facilities, Harvard Medical School

Danny Beaudoin, Manager of Operations, Energy and Utilities, Harvard School of Public Health

Tom Vautin, Associate Vice President for Facilities and Environmental Services, Harvard University Operations Services

Jim Gray, Associate Vice President of Harvard Real Estate Services

Leith Sharp, Director, Harvard Green Campus Initiative

Panelists will discuss Harvard's green achievements, including

- Green building design and onsite renewable energy installation projects,
- Behavioral change campaigns promoting energy and resource conservation,
- The purchase of renewable energy certificates to offset current electricity loads,
- Use of the Green Campus Loan Fund to finance high performance renovations and upgrades,
- Harvard's on-site bio-diesel fueling station,
- And much more!

Program will conclude with open discussion about the Sustainability Principles, Harvard's green achievements to date, and where we can go from here.
